The South Snohomish County Visitor Information Center is located in the Wickers Building and is operated daily by the Snohomish County Tourism Bureau. The Center offers tourists and residents an abundance of community, county and statewide information, US Forest passes and souvenirs for purchase. The Center is South County staffed by friendly, knowledgeable volunteers.

Built in 1919, the Wickers Building was the first general store and post office on North Trunk West Road in Alderwood Manor (now 196th St. SW in Lynnwood), and a familiar landmark halfway between Seattle and Everett to passengers on the Interurban. The City rescued the building from demolition during I-5 interchange construction in 1997, and relocated it to Heritage Park in 2003. The Tudor Revival-style building has been carefully restored to preserve its distinctive features. The Wickers Building is listed on the Washington State Heritage Register and the City of Lynnwood Register of Historic Landmarks.

Heritage exhibits throughout the park tell stories of life in early Alderwood Manor, and its historic structures have been renovated and repurposed as community resource facilities. These include in addition to the Visitor Center the Wickers Museum in the Wickers Building; the Heritage Resource Center in the Superintendent's Cottage; the Sno-Isle Genealogy Library in the Humble House; and Interurban Car No. 55.
